Todd,

Because the AD contract is already signed, it would be better to have a separate agreement for the football coach consulting. Otherwise, we have to amend the AD contract. Would you like to use the AD contract as I revised it to comply with NSHE contract policies and change the position and amount for the football coach position? I can do it tomorrow if you would like me to do so. Just let me know.

Kindest regards,

Mary

Captains of Industry: Education is in Greg Mosier's blood; UNR dean of business driven to teach
Expectations. That, more than a chance encounter or a timely turn of events in his formative years, was the propellant in Greg Mosier's career. So, when it came to higher education, expectations were high, indeed, in the Mosier family when Greg and his four siblings reached college age. When your father was the president of the local college, you were expected to go to college. "My dad was one of 11 kids who all went to college. That made quite an impression on me," Mosier recalled of growing up in Claremore, Okla. "There was always the expectation that you'd go to college. That was high in my family."

Budget boost allows UNR College of Agriculture to help local farmers, ranchers
The future is looking a little brighter for the University of Nevada, Reno's College of Agriculture. UNR President Marc Johnson has announced the College of Agriculture, Biochemistry and Natural Resources will receive an additional $333,000 to its base budget, beginning July 1. Members of Northern Nevada's local food movement support the decision, which will allow the dean of the college to hire more faculty to conduct research and provide programs that will help farmers and ranchers.

Radon a silent killer; prevent this common health risk with easy, free testing
Radon is the leading cause of lung cancer among nonsmokers, and unless you test for radon, you will never know if your home harbors the silent but deadly gas. Radon is colorless, odorless and tasteless, and the only way to determine a home's radon level is to test. Testing is simple and easy, and the University of Nevada Cooperative Extension's Radon Education Program is offering free radon test kits now through Feb. 28 at Cooperative Extension offices around the state, as well as several partner locations. For a complete list of locations, visit www.radonnv.com.

RTC transit plan, merchants could give new life to Reno's declining Fourth Street area

Diverse businesses: In recent years, the street has become a crazy quilt of properties and stakeholders. "One of the complications in trying to come up with a vision for that area is that there is such a diversity of so many active businesses there today, and not only are the businesses different but the streetscapes are different," said Alicia Barber, director of public history/oral history project at the University of Nevada, Reno, who recently completed an oral history on Fourth Street. She said that Fourth Street is a reflection of the city's identity crisis.

Just like their human friends, dogs face obesity epidemic

Owner derial factors in pet obesity. Mike Teglas, associate professor of veterinary microbiology at the University of Nevada, Reno, cited a 2006 Pfizer Animal Health study that showed just 17 percent of owners with obese pets agreed that their pets were obese. "I've had dogs come in that are 30 to 40 pounds overweight. The owner is 50 or 60 pounds overweight. It can be hard to have that discussion. They're taking it personally," he said. "I've been in clinics where we have it written in charts not to bring up the pet's weight because the owner gets so defensive."

Dan Hinxman: Hiring Brian Polian makes for stop-gap decision

Brian Polian's résumé is impressive, he's a great recruiter and college football insiders will tell you he's a high character guy with a bright future. But is he right for Nevada? Probably. But probably not for long. Polian, the 38-year-old son of former NFL exec Bill Polian who also has two brothers who have been NFL executives, has agreed to become the Wolf Pack's next football coach, according to multiple reports.

Source: Polian Accepts Head Football job at Nevada

A source outside the University of Nevada has told News 4 that Texas A&M special teams coordinator and tight ends coach Brian Polian has been offered and has accepted the head coaching position with the Wolf Pack. The 38 year old Polian has coached at Stanford, Notre Dame, Central Florida and Buffalo.

Nevada football: Could Reno support $1 million salary for new coach?

A lot will change for Wolf Pack football over the next couple of months, following last week's resignation of longtime coach Chris Ault. There is one thing, however, that isn't expected to change: the head-coaching salary. Ault made a Mountain West-low $493,000 last season, which was nearly $425,000 below the league's average. The day Ault stepped down, UNR President Marc Johnson said he expected the salary to stay around the same level.

Conference Reset: Why the Mountain West is so darn good this season

TEAM BETTER THAN ITS RECORD: Nevada already has a handful of losses: to UC Irvine, Marshall, Drake, Pacific and Oregon. The Wolf Pack still have two talented guards in Malik Story and Deonte Burton, and David Carter's team will claim its share of league wins, even in a loaded Mountain West

Nevada women's basketball: Pack breaks down in late stages

For 36 minutes, the Wolf Pack controlled its fate. But, as has happened often this season, Nevada's inexperience led to a breakdown, which led to its fourth straight loss. Cal State Bakersfield rallied from 10 points down, 76-66, with 4 minutes, 59 seconds to play, to take an 83-80 win in women's basketball Saturday at Lawlor Events Center.

Scott/, The rumors are running hot. We do not have an agreement in place but hope to early next week in preparation for the Friday Regents meeting. I gave explicit instructions to the search firm to bring an ethnically diverse group of candidates to interview. Cary Groth and I interviewed five candidates on Wednesday and Thursday in Dallas. One of the five is African American and one of the five is Hispanic American. I will be able to explain the characteristics of our selection Friday at the meeting, if we can close a deal.
